Russia & the Russians.

By Maria Weston Chapman.

Any adequate work bearing the above title, on the condition & prospects of Russia, was published in Paris in 1847, by Nicolas Tourgueneff. This gentleman is a Russian noble, exiled & under sentence of death (since 1825) for having cast in his lot with the serfs by advocating their emancipation while a member of the supreme Council of State. He is one of those truly wise & good men whose opinions cannot fail to have great influence wherever they are known. With him freedom is a question of fundamental right as well as of national policy. After reading certain copies of the Liberator & Standard, & Uncle Tom's Cabin which were sent him, he addressed to me the following letter, which I entreated permission to publish here. I am convinced that a body of freemen in all countries who should be at the same time great enough to rise able for themselves a sphere of moral action higher than that of national policy, founded on the deepest principles of universal & absolute right, would soon be able to change the most asbest of the world & abolish such institutions as serfdom & Slavery.

It is to make such men acquainted with each other for such a purpose, that the "Liberty Bell" is published.

Paris Nov 18th
Thursday morning

Dear Caroline.

We have had good success with our Fair. Some 700 francs worth will be sent. You can sell it for three times as much. It is well chosen, all small objects, authors, elegant & useful. I have bought the Statuette of Cambronne. Seen his wife - she let me have it at 250 fcs what is 50 fr. less than the shops. The printmans are greatly pleased with it, & it fairly put de Lamenais' prejudices to flight. Defauges contributes 20 fcs towards it & Arago & Lamartine Michel Goujon etc, Barnes Ed have

Madame Emile Lauvrière Paris

towards it gives a hundred fs. I think perhaps I can get more. If people were in town there would be no difficulty. I do not grudge the money for I should not have got it for anything else. I suggest that a subscription be opened, to give it from the fair, to H. B Stowe. $100. ought to be the price. It has been sold as high as 600 fs by the Magazines here. It is a just title mark of art. It might be bought for any other Abs. Lincoln, a Lowell, a Phillips or Abby Kelley but they don't want rewards of merit. You can get Bro Storrs money to give it to H. B. Stowe. I dare say Lucretia Bradley & 20 other such, would pay $5. each for the tears they had shed, & I desire to get it. J. Winslow gave me $100, wishing it was a thousand. I suppose we shall have to acknowledge about 50 dollars worth to Greene's, when we send it. We should get it off by next Steamer to Boston via Liverpool, as the Junkin has just put into Cowes in distress.

Mrs Toms Cabin is translated by Emile La Bedollière, an unknown littérateur, a Book forme. Not Mrs — no taste of the Sort preserved. In this Boy's hands in the Siecle and previously. In the Presse best of all, by A. Pelletan an evangelical clergyman — French Protestant Whom Pashoud is going to bring to us He has been in the U S & knows Mrs Stowe personally. I got a letter from her, authorising the Jonnettes, but as it is so dampy done, they will not be able to undertake every reason will make some extracts for a Bookseller. The next good translation cannot I fear be undertaken It should be Madame Belloc Des Loges & I to undertake the private collaboration of Negro Baton & Yankee pronunciation. I send you ½ dozen Nos of the Press Which please forward to Mrs Stowe from me after you have looked at

Ms. A.9.2.2.74